VOTE FOR AYLSWORTH.

Swiss Funeral Customs.

Swiss funeral customs are most peculiar. At the death of a person the family inserts a formal black edged announcement in the papers asking for sympathy and stating that "the mourning urn" will be exhibited during certain hours on a special day. In front of the house where the person died there is placed a little black table, covered with a black cloth, on which stands a black jar. Into this the friends and acquaintances of the family drop little black margined visiting cards, sometimes with a few words of sympathy on them. The urn is put on the table on the day of the funeral. Only men ever go to the obsequy, and they generally follow the hearse on foot.

MAY DUSK RAIN.

To the morn, when the gold of the tap-
That mellowed the east for a space
Is lost in the fold of the vapor
That trails a torn banner of lace—
To the grain minkled musk of the daytime
Its lit and its laughter be long,
But in the warm dusk of the Maytime
It comes like a sigh and a song.

Perfumed by the breath of the mazes,
Of flower weeds, tangled and tossed,
And sweet with the death of the daisies,
The season, has lavished and lost;
In the cloud wove dusk of the daytime
Its mild ministrations is blest,
But in the pure dusk of the Maytime
At twilight 'tis rapture and rest.

NOVEMBER DYEING.

Success, Profit and Pleasure When Diamond Dyes Are Used.

Thousands of city and country women and girls will dye during the month of November. Old dresses, costumes, capes, jackets, wraps, shawls, and clothing for men and boys will be brought from attics, closets and boxes, and prepared for the dye bath.

It is safe to assert that every wife, mother and daughter who has heard of the wonder-working Diamond Dyes will use them in preference to any other make of dyes.

It is unnecessary to dilate upon the many grand results that users of Diamond Dyes obtain. A few words will tell the story. The Diamond Dyes will make the old things look as fresh and as good as new, and will give colors that sun or washing cannot fade. The unfortunate women who are induced by some dealers to buy imitation and adulterated dyes will certainly suffer loss of money, time and materials.

There is profit in home dyeing only when the Diamond Dyes are used. See that you get the "Diamond" from your dealer.

HOME WORK FOR FAMILIES.

We want the services of a number of families to do knitting for us at home, whole or spare time. We furnish $20 machine and supply the yarn free, and pay for the work as it is sent in. TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber
Nov. 7th, 1898.

Council met in regular session, Mayor Jamieson presiding, present, Messrs. Leonard, Alexander, Vandusen, Ming, Day, Miller F. F., Miller S. R., Madole, Aylsworth, Ruttan, Boyle.

The minutes of last regular session were read and confirmed.

The following applications for the position of market clerk were received and ordered laid on the table: C. O. Bruton, Jno. R. Doller.

A communication from Robt. Light was read calling attention to the unsafe condition of the walk on the west side of Richard St. from Mill St. to the end of the walk. It was referred to the Street committee with power to act.

A petition, signed by 111 of the ratepayers of Napanee, was read praying the council to submit a by-law to be voted on at the Municipal election asking the town to grant $6,000 towards the establishment of a pork packing factory here. Messrs. Bicknell and W. G. Wilson addressed the council in reference to the same. The matter was referred to a special committee consisting of Messrs. Madole, Ruttan and Aylsworth, why will confer with the town solicitor and report at a special meeting of the council to be held next Monday evening.

A petition was received asking for a walk on Ann St. from Centre to Robert Sts., and also that a crossing be built on Centre St. It was referred to the Street committee.

The report of the Finance Committee, showing a balance of $395.51 was received.

The Street Committee recommended that the walk from the post office on the east side of John St. be repaired this year with a view of putting down a cement walk next year.

The Poor and Sanitary committee reported an expenditure of $35.84 since Sept. 17th. This includes the keeping of Mrs. Woods at the House of Providence for 12 weeks.

The applications for the position of market clerk were on motion ordered to be filed. The matter of securing a market clerk was left in the hands of the Market Committee for the balance of the year.

The matter of needed repairs to a drain on Bridge St. was referred to the Street Committee with power to act.

Dr. Ming drew the attention of the council to the rubbish being dumped on Pearl St. south of the Swing Bridge, and that the practice should be stopped.

HEART STAGGERS.

Here's Confession of Intense Heart Suffering and Weakness That Made Life One Long Dreadful Nightmare —Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart was the Saving Agent.

Mr. Thomas Cooke, 260 Johnston St., Kingston, writes this of himself and how Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart helped him: "I have used in all six bottles of this great heart remedy and it has completely cured me of heart weakness, from which I suffered severely for years. Prior to using it the slightest exertion or excitement would produce severe palpitation and nervous depression. To-day I am as strong as ever, and without one symptom of Heart disease. Sold by A. W. Grange & Bro.

But in the perfume of the Maytime
At twilight 'tis rapture and rest.

As soft as the lip of the willow
That touches the argentine sand,
And light as the dip of the willow
In waves that are buoyant and bland,
And sweet as the heart of the Maytime,
And faint as the wind in the grain,
In the dusk and the murmur of the Maytime
Are the redolent traces of the rain.
—Hattie Whitney, in Woman's Home Companion.

THE HUMBLE BOY.

He Bided His Time and Got Even With His Tormentors.

One midsummer term an undisciplined, weak-kneed youngster presented himself at a well known public school and was immediately pounced upon by the boys and hauled off, to be broken in. They practiced all the usual tricks upon him, and he bore them meekly—so meekly, in fact, that the boys were contemptuous and made scathing remarks about his effeminacy and lack of spirit.

After this he was taken to the lumber room and sternly commanded to black all the boots for the following day. The boys were supposed to attend to their own foot-gear, but the task generally fell to the lot of the weakest among them, and it was a favorite plan to order newcomers to do the work unaided. This particular new boy received the order resignedly and said, "Thank you, sir," quite humbly, when one of the monitors kicked him and told him to hurry along. He seemed almost overwhelmed with gratitude for the honor done to him and promised to discharge his duty manfully if he were only given sufficient time.

He was therefore left to himself, and the boys went away in high feather, thanking their stars that a happy chance had sent such a willing slave to pander to their needs. An hour passed, and then it occurred to the monitor before mentioned to go and see how the new boy was getting on. He threw open the door of the lumber room, and a sight met his eyes which almost choked him.

The new boy had a white buckskin cricket boot in his hand and was busily covering it with blacking.

"You big idiot, whatever are you doing?" screamed the monitor. "You're rubbing white boots instead of black ones."

"Yes, sir, I am," answered the new boy with studded innocence. "That's what you wished me to do, isn't it? The others are black enough, so I thought I'd get through the white ones first. I've polished 15 pairs, but they don't look very nice somehow."

The monitor stormed and raved, but he could not renew the color of the cricket and tennis boots, and their owners had to make the best of a bad job. They've given up trying to score off guileless new boys now.—Chums.

Refreshing Sleep.

Sleep, refreshing sleep, has a wonderful influence. It is the time which the vital force uses to repair the system, to assist digestion and to prepare the whole being for the labors of a fresh day. Even "40 winks" in many cases is a great benefit, and in many cases of fever and nervous troubles patients should seldom be aroused, unless it is absolutely necessary, to administer medicine. Opiates, when given, frequently but mock the patient with a seeming relief, only to result in some aggravation of the trouble. They more or less paralyze the digestive organs, prevent vital repair, goad the brain into feverish dreams and leave the nerves irritated and finally depressed rather than rested.—New York Ledger.

Adulterated Rice.

So cheap and common an article of food as rice is adulterated. The purpose is to give the grains an attractive color, the articles used being oil and paraffin, but the effect on the rice is deleterious. Those oily substances, a New Orleans paper says, soak into the grain and make it hard. The result is that more cooking is needed, and even then the rice often remains hard and to the extent is made indigestible. In addition the oil adds to the weight of the grain, and thus again is the buyer cheated.

At the trial of the petition against the return of Chas. Calder in South Ontario, Wallace Nesbitt, who had charge of the case for the respondent, informed the Conservatives that if Calder didn't throw up the seat the majority of the prominent workers in the riding would be disqualified. And still some people profess to wonder why the Hon John Dryden was defeated in the general election.

The tu quoque, or your another, style of argument is perhaps best avoided. The prominent party workers at the Conservative Convention on Saturday must have thought "some things," however, when Dr. Meacham and Uriah Wilson, M.P., were delivering their little lecture on bribery. There was a man, many years ago, who delivered thanks that he was not as other men, and there are still a few of his kind left.

The charges against "improper Grit officials" in Lennox are not intended for home consumption. While the Mail & Empire and other outside papers are teeming with charges of rascality and partisanship against the officials of Lennox The Beaver has not a word to say on this subject. These charges would have no force in Lennox because there is nothing to substantiate them. They are intended to do service outside the riding, where

An Epileptic Sufferer.

A FENLON FARMER TELLS OF HIS REMARKABLE CURE.

At Regular Intervals He Was Subject to Fits, and Doctors Told Him the Trouble Was Incurable—Now Free From the Malady.

From the Warrier, Lindsay, Ont.

Mr. Robert McGee, of the 9th concession of Fenlon, Victoria county, says in speaking of his cure from this terrible malady:—"I am 35 years of age and live on the old homestead where I was born and have lived always since, and where my own little family were born. This part of Fenlon is known as McGee's Settlement, there are so many of that name living in the vicinity. Never in my life did I know what a day's sickness was until March, 1895, when without any known cause and without any warning I was stricken down with an epileptic fit. It came on me in the night, causing great consternation in the household, as my wife, who never saw anything of the kind before, thought it was my end; as for myself I neither felt nor knew anything that was going on about me. After coming out of the convulsions, which they tell me usually lasted from fifteen to twenty minutes, I would fall into a heavy sleep with a dull, heavy feeling, and all the muscles of my body would be sore. This would pass away and in a day or two after the attack I would be able to attend to my farm work, but strange every four months after as regular as a clock I would be seized with a fit, which always came on me in the night. Various doctors and specialists were consulted and I took several different medicines, but without effecting a cure. Several doctors said the disease was incurable. I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pill in the newspapers and was advised by friends who had experienced cures from other seemingly incurable ailments, to try them. In November 1896 I commenced and kept on taking them regularly for a year. The dreaded period passed and passed again and again without a repetition of my trouble, and I felt that I was at last released from this terrible malady. I am now in the best of health, and I attribute my cure to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In conversation with Mrs. McGee she said that her husband's trouble was the cause of most seriously affecting her nerves and general health, as she was always living in dread, and could never enjoy a night's rest. The slightest noise would startle her, and if it had not been for the kindness of a neighbor who always came and stayed at the house over night she believes she would have broken down altogether. She also is thankful for the great change that has been wrought, and is only to glad to let others with similar afflictions know that there is a remedy for this terrible disease.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerve, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

GUARDING THE MINT.

HOW THE PHILADELPHIA INSTITUTION IS PROTECTED.

Little Chance For Any One to Get Rich Quickly by Helping Himself to Uncle Sam's Treasure—Patrols, Revolvers and Winchester in Plenty.

Probably not one person out of a hundred who pass by the Philadelphia mint, that grim looking edifice at Chestnut and Juniper streets, after nightfall realizes what is going on inside. There is nothing mean about Uncle Sam, but he is determined that any one who gets his money shall get it honestly and by process duly laid down. Therefore he has taken all kinds of precautions to properly protect, especially at night, the millions upon millions piled up in the vaults.

The doors of the mint are closed every weekday promptly at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. After that hour no one but mint employees have any business within the walls which inclose so much money, and no one can either stay in or get in without a special permit from the superintendent. Needless to say, this is difficult to obtain.

Simultaneously with the closing of the doors at 4 o'clock the first shift of the night guard goes on duty. The shift is composed of the captain of the guard and 11 stalwart men. As the men file out to begin their round each one is handed a big Colt's revolver of the most approved pattern and loaded with big cartridges.

From then on till midnight seven of the 11 guards patrol without cessation every floor of the inside of the mint, from the corridors of the gloomy vaults where, away down in the earth, are stowed eighty odd million dollars in silver and almost as much gold, to the top floor, where there is nothing more valuable than machinery. Placed at frequent intervals throughout the corridors are electrical devices for enabling the captain of the guard to keep tabs on his men. Each of these little machines communicates with the rotunda opposite the Chestnut street entrance to the mint. Here it is that the captain is stationed all through the long hours of his shift. Every two minutes and a half the central machine in the rotunda denotes the presence of some one of the guard at some particular station in the building. If it doesn't, then the captain knows that something is wrong, and he immediately proceeds to discover what it is.

But it has been a long time since the little machine failed to send forth its announcement at the proper time, for the mint guards are patrolling up and down outside the big building, carefully watching that no suspicious characters approach too near the vast treasure left in their care.

Promptly at midnight the second shift of the night guard puts in an appearance to relieve the early shift. It is also composed of a captain and 11 men, and they are split up, as the other squad, into inside and outside details. From midnight on until 7 o'clock in the morning they follow in the footsteps of the first shift, with every faculty alert to catch an intruder.

The big revolvers are not the only weapons upon which the guards have to rely. On each side of the main corridor leading from the Chestnut street entrance stands a walnut case. Through the polished glass front of one frown 20 Winchester rifles. The other contains as many ugly looking carbines. To grab these dispensers of death would be but the work of an instant for the guards, and then woe be unto any man or men upon whom it might be found necessary to turn them.

For the revolvers there is kept constantly on hand in the mint 500 rounds of ammunition, and for the rifles and carbines 2,500 rounds. Each of the guards is an expert in the use of both the pistol and the gun, and each is en-

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, NOV. 11, 1898.

CHARLIE CALDER's good showing in South Ontario is attributed to the fact that he is a very rich man.

The electors of Lennox will now be in a position to institute comparisons between the Minister of Education and Whitney's minister in prospective.

DR. MEACHAM does not possess the Divine right to represent Lennox, although after listening to the doctor you would be inclined to that opinion.

In all the years that Dr. Meacham has represented us in the Legislature what did he do for Lennox? Or for the good of the province? Did he ever rise above the status of a petty fault finder?

BECAUSE Mr. Ferd Blair preferred charges against a number of highly esteemed and prominent Liberals in Lennox it doesn't necessarily follow that they are true. The men accused deny the truth of the allegations and Mr. Blair has admitted that personally he doesn't know anything about the charges.

THE egotism of Dr. Meacham would be amusing if it were not so nauseating. According to the Beaver's report of his remarks at the Conservative Convention the doctor said that Mr. Aylsworth's only hope of defeating him was by the lavish use of money. Who is this mighty man, who carries the riding of Lennox round in his pocket? Is he some ancient king, who rules by divine right? No, he is a medical practitioner in the village of Odessa and so far as we have been able to ascertain has no mortgage on the constituency. It is true he is a professional man, while his opponent is only a tiller of the soil, but if the edict has gone forth that none but a professional man shall represent Lennox, we believe the large body of the electorate are prepared to disregard it. Dr. Meacham will be legitimately defeated on the 18th inst., and by a majority well calculated to reduce his name of self esteem.

to service outside the riding, where the man thus libeled have no redress. The Government officials in Lennox have kept out of politics and their conduct has been blameless but nevertheless they have not escaped calumny.

MR. BOWEN E. AYLSWORTH has been for years an able, active and useful member of the County Council of Lennox. He occupied the position of Warden of the county in an efficient and impartial manner. At the sessions of the County Council he proved himself a ready and able debater. Of this the Beaver is quite well aware still it endeavors to convey the impression that if Mr. Aylsworth is elected to the Legislature he will be a mere voting machine. Mr. Aylsworth is quite the peer of Dr. Meacham in debating power and will prove a more useful member of the Legislature. He is a clear headed, practical farmer and will make an ideal representative for this banner agricultural riding.

"We hope and trust the days of personal abuse and slander are ended here" says the Beaver, in the opening paragraph of an article on the bye-election campaign. In the same article the Beaver says: "The most serious offence charged against Mr. Aylsworth was that of downright bribery and corruption." Our contemporary is probably aware that all the charges preferred against Mr. Aylsworth were withdrawn and that Dr. Meacham and his friends kindly paid all the costs of the protest. If the Beaver is consistent in its hope that "the days of personal abuse and slander are ended here" it should not lend its columns to regaling charges the falsity of which have been admitted.

ACCORDING to the Beaver's report of Dr. Meacham's address at the Conservative Convention on Saturday he referred to the Hon. Mr. Hardy, Premier of Ontario, as a coward, falsifier, and a hasty, illtempered man, unworthy of confidence. The Liberals of Lennox were denounced as a brood of bribers. The Beaver holds the doctor up as a mighty speaker, but it appears that the association with Mr. Whitney has caused him to fall into the error of mistaking abuse for argument. The great J. W. Bell, M. P., also declared at the same meeting that the Government was run by Crown land agents, wood rangers, road bosses and political hacks. We wonder if J. W. Bell had other business in town or did he come all the way from the wilds of Addington to talk such "Tommy rot."

Children Cry for CASTORIA.

Goldsmith's Generosity.

A beggar once asked alms of Oliver Goldsmith as he walked with a friend up Fleet street, and he gave her a shilling. His companion, knowing something of the woman, censured the writer for his excess of humanity, saying that the shilling was misapplied, as she would spend it for liquor. "If it makes her happy in any way, my end is answered," replied Goldsmith.

Another proof that the doctor's generosity was not always regulated by discretion was at a time when, after much delay, a day was fixed to pay the £40 due his tailor. Goldsmith procured the money, but a friend calling upon him and relating a piteous tale of his goods being seized for rent, the thoughtless but benevolent author gave him all the money. The tailor called and was told that if he had come a little sooner he could have had the money, but that he had just parted with every shilling of it to a friend in distress, adding, "I would have been an unfeeling monster not to have relieved trouble when in my power."

pence, sir; that's the legal fare."

"All right, my good man, only start quickly, and I'll give you a couple of fares."

Cabby jumped upon the box with a beaming face, flicked up his horse and shouted jocosely to an imaginary wife:

"Don't wait dinner if I'm late, Mary Ann! I'm taking the king of Klondike to 'is imperial habode!'"—London Telegraph.

The Insurance Man's Guess.

"He is the stupidest man—he never opens his mouth without putting his foot in it," said the young girl of the clerk who had taken her to the natatorium.

"Perhaps that is the only way he can make both ends meet on his small salary," remarked the insurance man.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

One Way of Posting a Letter.

The island of St. Kilda is often visited by tourist steamers in the summer, but its regular mail communication with the mainland, some 160 miles distant, is confined to the annual visits of the steamer which brings the factor and his stores, says Household Words. But if at other times the inhabitants desire to communicate with Great Britain they employ the following curious device: A man cuts the rough model of a boat from a billet of wood, hollows it partly out, places in the hollow a tin or small bottle containing a letter, nails on a deck, and when the wind is blowing toward the mainland launches the tiny craft, having first connected it with a bladder, which drives along before the wind and acts as a tug to the little mail-boat. But the set of the gulf stream frequently drives this curious craft out of its course, and as often as not it reaches the Shetland islands or the coast of Norway, where, however, the letter is pretty sure to be found and posted to its destination.

MANY GO INSANE.

Women's Burden's are Heavy and Hard to Bear.

Unless Dodd's Kidney Pills are Used, Then Diseases of Women are Cured, and suffering Ceases.—Mrs. Ellen Dawson's Case.

Toronto, Nov. 7. — The daily papers from day to day contain reports of the wreckage of once happy homes, through the insanity of mothers, whose reason has been destroyed by illness.

Women's burdens are many and heavy, and hard to bear. They are, as a rule, borne in silence, for women don't want to incur the expense of calling in the doctor; they don't want to worry their husbands. They continue suffering in silence, while their ailments are sapping their strength, undermining their health, and reason, and hurrying them to the grave.

It is needless to call in a doctor in most of such cases. The suffering women can cure herself at very small expense. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the remedy she needs.

In ninety-nine of every hundred cases of "Female Complaints," the trouble has its origin in diseased Kidneys. Very soon the urinary, and reproductive organs are involved, and the sufferer becomes a frail and wasted shadow of her former self.

By restoring the Kidneys to sound health, and so ensuring their prompt and proper action, "Female Complaints" can be quickly thoroughly and permanently cured. Mrs. Ellen Dawson, 640 Gerrard St. E., has discovered the value of Dodd's Kidney Pills in these cases. She writes: "For over six years I suffered intensely with Palpitation of the heart, and Female Weakness. One of Toronto's best doctors attended me, and I used many different medicines but got no relief till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have taken eight boxes, and am completely cured."

Dodd's Kidney Pills will do for all suffering women, what they did for Mrs. Dawson. Test them. They convince you by curing the pistol and the gun, and each is endowed with a plentiful stock of courage; hence a combination capable of successfully resisting almost anything less than a regiment.

The superintendent and assistant custodian both talked to the reporter about the methods in use to protect the mint and its contents. Both smiled significantly when the possibility of one getting away with a portion of the vast treasure was suggested.

"It would be folly for any one to try it," was the superintendent's only comment. To it the assistant custodian nodded emphatic assent.

"I have been here for a good many years," the latter said, "and no such attempt has ever been made. It is practically impossible for any one to break into the mint from the outside, and no one could secrete himself in the building during the hours when it is open to visitors and hope to avoid discovery. We search every nook and corner of the structure carefully as soon as the doors are closed for the day, and you may rest assured if any one who had no business within these walls was found he would regret the day he was born."

In addition to the two shifts of night guards, the superintendent and assistant custodian have a habit of dropping in at the mint at odd hours of the night to see that everything is going on all right.

The mint is connected with the central telephone station, and should there be trouble the captain of the guard could communicate with police headquarters in a brief space of time.

"If you come across anybody who thinks he can get rich quickly by helping himself to our coin," remarked the superintendent in parting, "just advise him to think it over carefully first."

In compliance with the superintendent's suggestion the advice is hereby given.

And it is pretty good advice to follow too.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The population of Antwerp includes 20,000 Germans, who, it is said, buy their goods of German merchants only.

No Cause For Commiseration.

"Poor Dibles! They say he got a pair of beautiful black eyes lately. I feel sorry for him."

"You needn't. He got a very handsome girl with them."—Short Skits.

The Holland Throne.

A Chillicothe man, H. T. Houghnay, once occupied the throne of Holland, though only for a minute. "It was when I was a ship officer," said the captain, "that myself and another officer were being shown through the royal apartments during the absence of the king and the queen. Little Wilhelmina was then only a few days old. The throne was nothing grand in my eyes. I have seen nicer looking barber chairs in America. When the guards were not looking, I jumped upon the throne and exclaimed, 'Behold the king, the king of Holland!' In an instant the soldiers hustled me out of there, and it was only by the most liberal use of Dutch money that I persuaded them not to send me to the guardhouse."—Kansas City Star.

Brier Wood Pipes.

The brier pipes used in the United States were formerly imported to a large extent from Europe. The greater number came from France, but a good many were supplied from England. Now they are almost exclusively made here. American brier pipes are now produced in very great variety and of every quality, from the very cheapest to the very finest, and they are made in better styles and put up more suitably for the trade than those imported, with the result that they have all but entirely supplanted brier pipes of European make in this market.—New York Sun.

A Bright Youth.

A bright young Australian at Perth, when his father killed his mother and suicided, suppressed the news for several hours while he tried to trade "awful tragedy" copy to the Perth newspapers. His enterprise missed cash, for they wouldn't deal. Fancy such a boy being wasted on a community of sand groppers!—Sydney

IT IS EASY TO KEEP WELL IF WE KNOW HOW—SOME OF THE CONDITIONS NECESSARY TO PERFECT HEALTH.

The importance of maintaining good health is easily understood, and it is really a simple matter if we take a correct view of the conditions required. In perfect health the stomach promptly digests food, and thus prepares nourishment. The blood is employed to carry this nourishment to the organs, nerves, muscles and tissues which need it. The first great essential for good health, therefore, is pure, rich blood. Now it is certainly a fact that no medicine has such a record of cures as Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is literally true that there are hundreds of people alive and well today who would have been in their graves had they not taken Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is depended upon as a family medicine and general regulator of the system by tens of thousands of people. This is because Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood pure. This is the secret of its great success. Keep your system in good health by keeping your blood pure with Hood's Sarsaparilla, which absolutely cures when other medicines fail to do any good whatever.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Two Ways of Putting It.

"I notice, Miranda," remarked Mr. Neggeschoice, "that your first husband's clothes do not fit me."

"No, Cyrus," coincided Mrs. Neggeschoice, "with a little sigh. "You don't fit them."—Chicago Tribune.

Schley's Long Legs.

A Kansas City man who was a classmate of Schley's at Annapolis says that the admiral was looked upon as the best Spanish and French scholar in the navy. His department at the academy was modern languages. "I remember one thing in particular about him, and that is his long legs. He is not noticeably tall, but his legs are of wondrous length and he can run like a deer. In the navy they never tire of telling about Schley in Korea. During the trouble there we sent a landing party ashore in charge of Schley. The boat had not more than reached the shore when out jumped the marines to make a dash for the parapets, possibly half a mile away. In the lead was Schley. In a jiffy he was far ahead of everybody, his legs working vigorously, and when the embankments were reached he had practically distanced all the others."

UNEXPECTED HONOR.

The Amusing Predicament of a South-western Railroad Official.

They were talking about having a boom at Hardy, Ark., one fall during the administration of President Harrison. The town is situated on the beautiful Spring river and has the Memphis road. The idea of the boomers was to make a resort of the place, either for summer or winter pleasure seekers. About the time the boom was being planned the announcement was made that Russell Harrison, the president's son, was coming west and would pass through Hardy on his way to Kansas City. It was accordingly arranged that speeches should be made while the train stopped, not to speak of an ovation of anvils and fireworks.

For some reason the Harrison party did not pass through Hardy as arranged, but it happened, remarkably enough, that a

QUEER IDEAS OF FUN.

SAVAGES WHO LAUGH ONLY WHEN SOME ONE IS HURT.

The Writhings of a Victim Under Torture Send Them Into a Frenzy of Merriment—Painful Punishments That Evoke Yells of Glee.

The laugh, which is now so closely associated with good humor and kindly feeling, originally implied nothing of the sort. It expressed almost the reverse. It was the crow of triumph over a fallen foe.

Such is its nature still among savages and barbarous peoples, and its unexpected manifestations are occasionally very startling. Dancing on the body of a prostrate enemy is to them hilarious business. The writhing of a victim under torture is the funniest thing imaginable. A new device for torment is a clever jest. The inflicting of a ghastly wound as some poor wretch runs the gantlet makes them yell with glee. The things that shock or horrify or disgust the civilized man are about the only things worth laughing at from a savage's point of view.

With the exception, therefore, of rough practical jokes, which may possibly wrinkle his stolid features with a momentary grin, the barbarian has no appreciation of civilized humor. He can't see where the fun comes in if nobody is hurt.

This was curiously illustrated not long ago when a considerable number of Chinamen went to a New York theater to see a burlesque performance. When the American part of the audience laughed, the delegation from Chinatown sat with faces absolutely blank, but the moment any hint of brutality, tragedy or tears appeared on the stage their heavy features lighted and were wreathed in smiles. It was a strange thing to witness, but it was all in perfect keeping with the cruel instincts of their race.

Even the knowledge that he is himself to be the next victim does not spoil the fun of a cruel spectacle for a barbarian thoroughbred. Here is an instance:

A number of Siamese who had been engaged in a bloody revolt were captured red handed and sentenced to military execution. A platoon of soldiers was drawn up with loaded muskets, before whom the doomed men were led out in squads of five or six to be shot, while those who were waiting their turn stood by, under guard, looking on.

When the first volley was fired, the victims, torn by the storm of bullets, leaped into the air with violent convulsions and fell dead. And this to the poor wretches who were about to go through the same experience seemed so fine a show and so excruciatingly funny that they were fairly convulsed with laughter.

Such is the humor of savages, and such doubtless were the beginnings of mirth the world over. Strange as it may seem, there are many hints of this barbarous origin in the fun of the most highly civilized. We no longer laugh at really tragic occurrences, it is true, for other and more humane emotions are too strongly excited.

But if we chance to see a ridiculous mishap which does not quite rise to the dignity of tragedy—an accident by which some one is greatly inconvenienced and annoyed without being seriously injured—the remnant of the savage breaks loose in us, and we laugh till the tears come.

Why else are we amused when we see a well dressed man thrown sprawling in the mud or deluged with dirty water from an upper window or driven up a tree by a cross dog or an ugly bull? Why else do we so keenly enjoy the agony of a man who has accidentally pounded his finger nail, instead of the tack he was driving into the carpet, or laugh at the unfortunate who blindly steps on a stray barrel hoop which flips up and slaps him in the face? private coach full of the Memphis road's officials was fastened to the north bound train that reached Hardy about half past 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The youngest member of the party was Mr. B. L. Winchell, the assistant general passenger agent of the road. He was then past 30, but every railroad man in the country who knew Ben Winchell would have said that he did not look more than 20.

Mr. Winchell was standing on the broad vestibule at the rear of the private car as the train rolled into Hardy, when a deafening noise ahead caused him to wonder if the engine had blown up. He leaped for the rail and looked forward. A great crowd was gathered and anvils and cannons were being fired by the dozen. The train stopped so that the crowd was placed at the end of the private car. Cheers were proposed and given with a will, and shouts of "There he is!" "Hurrah for the president's son!" and "How young!" were heard on every side. Then the cannons and anvils were touched off again and some of the skyrockets and Roman candles were fired off in the face of the glaring afternoon sun.

Mr. Winchell was dazed. He did not understand the meaning of it all. He thought that they were advertising the town, but he could not understand the meaning of the shouts and exclamations. Then it struck him that there might be some important personage in a forward car, and he at once went to look. The train started on before he got through, when one of the officials who had got the hang of the situation met Winchell and rushed him back.

"Hang it, Ben," he shouted, "go back on the platform and bow, make a speech—do something, for heaven's sake! You're the president's son."

Winchell didn't understand anything about it, but he went back on the platform and bowed and smiled until he felt like an automaton. Then it was explained to him. The people of Hardy were shocked to learn next day that they had not seen the president's son, and they at once declared all boom proceedings off.—Detroit Free Press.

Tough Fare.

In a New Zealand town one of the municipal candidates, a pronounced Scotsman, had received a present of a huge Scotch thistle, which at the moment happened to be lying on the table of his committee room. A friend, entering, withdrew suddenly with the remark, "I beg your pardon; I didn't know you were at luncheon."—San Francisco Wave.

THE VERY PROTEUS OF ALL DISEASES. IT IS COMMONLY KNOWN AS GRIPPE.

Paine's Celery Compound the Only Medicine that Can Cope With the Dread Visitor.

The old enemy gripe is now prevalent in many sections of the land, and, as in the past, it is the same old insidious foe—cruel and deadly.

The late eminent English physician, Sir Morell MacKenzie, held that gripe was the result of "poisoned nerves." Sir Morrell compares it to an extraordinary disturbance in the telegraphic system produced by a thunder-storm, which is nothing compared with the freaks played by the living conductors in the human body when the governing centres are out of gear.

It is certain that the majority of medical men now agree about the theory of "poisoned nerves," which explain the almost infinite variety of the attacks that mark the disease. The profound impression made on the nervous system by the poison explains all the after effects of the malady, and more especially that curious loss of vital energy experienced by victims of gripe.

In past seasons, when gripe was epidemic, the ablest and most thoughtful doctors prescribed Paine's Celery Compound, a medicine that acts directly on the nerves of the body, cleansing them from all deadly poisons, toning and bracing up

It is noticeable that children often laugh at things which do not amuse adults, but, on the contrary, shock and pain them. That is because the child's finer sensibilities are as yet imperfectly developed. He is still near the savage state. There is a very prevalent sentiment to the contrary, but this is the fact.

In proportion as men become truly civilized, however, their sense of humor becomes refined, and they revolt at any suggestion of brutality. Yet it is worthy of remark that the gentlest among us are frequently amused at a picture or a story representing things the actual occurrence of which would shock us greatly.—Boston Post.

FEEDING A SKELETON.

A Hotel Man's Experience With a Freak Boarder.

"Once in awhile I have some freak boarders," said a hotel manager. "One time I had a living skeleton who came very near breaking me up in business. He came here for a long stay, as he was going to make the rounds of all the museums in town. His manager came to me and made arrangements for the skeleton to live at my hotel while he was in the city. I supposed that a living skeleton didn't live on much of anything but water, so I made him a rate away down—$3 a week, I believe—it was for board and room. The skeleton arrived early one morning, so the first meal he had at the hotel was breakfast.

"After he had finished his breakfast and gone to his room I went to the dining room and asked the waiter what the skeleton had eaten. I nearly fell dead when the waiter told me that the new boarder had consumed three cups of coffee, two orders of beefsteak, four fried eggs, two big baked potatoes, half a loaf of bread and a plate of buckwheat cakes. What do you think of that? That was certainly the worst surprise party I ever experienced. But there was no way out of it. I had made the rates and I could not 'fire' the skeleton out. He staid with me nearly six weeks, and he came close to eating me out of house and home."—Exchange.

The mysterious visitor gripe may pass many of this autumn and winter: we have, however, no guarantee that we shall be prepared for the arch enemy.

To those who are rundown, weary tired, sleepless, nervous, who have periodical headache and debility, we say, "Use Paine's Celery Compound to fortify the system for all emergencies." Physically strong men and women are not readily attacked by disease; the half-well and weakly mortals are the first victims. At this time precaution and prevention are all important; the banishment of nervousness, sleeplessness, languidness, debility and headache should be first thoughts with old and young.

To safely guard against gripe and all other common diseases, Paine's Celery Compound is the one effective medicine—the only sure preventive of danger.

Do not be misled by dealers who attempt, for the sake of large profits, to substitute something they call just as good; where health is concerned there is no other medicine that can take the place of Paine's Celery Compound and give satisfaction to

GENUINELY HARD UP.

Out of Three Hundred Accepting Free Beds Only Five Had "The Price."

A short time ago a curious test was applied at the London Congregational Union's Free Shelter For Homeless Men at Medland hall, in the east of London. The object of the test was to ascertain if the men were really as penniless as they represented themselves to be. The free shelter is intended for men who have not the fourpence necessary to pay for a night's lodging elsewhere, and one night Edward Wilson Gates, the shrewd superintendent of the philanthropic work of the union, announced that he would give sixpence to each man present who could prove that he had some money, but less than fourpence. A chuckling laugh passed over the 300, that being the maximum allowed in the hall.

"But how shall I know that you have less than fourpence?" asked Mr. Gates. "Search us!" cried the men. "You really mean it?"

"Yes."

"Very well, but if any one objects let him go to the gallery, and I guarantee that he shall not be turned away."

Only five of the 300 went up stairs, and the others were thoroughly searched by experienced men. Two hundred and forty-nine had nothing, one had a farthing, 11 had a halfpenny, one had three farthings, 13 had a penny, two had a penny farthing, four had three halfpence, nine twopence, three twopence halfpenny and two had threepence halfpenny. Thus out of the 300 men 295 had not the fourpence necessary for a "fo'penny doss" at a lodging house. It seems pretty clear, therefore, that the men were genuinely "hard up."—London Quiver.

HOW POMP WAS CONVERTED

Rainy Sunday at Church, Where He Was the Only Sinner.

Dr. Payson, the famous and beloved preacher of Portland, Me., used to tell the following pointed story:

One very stormy Sunday he went to church, more from habit than because he expected to find anybody there. Just after he had stepped inside the door an old negro came in and asked if Dr. Payson was to preach there that day, explaining that he was a stranger in town and had been advised to go to his church.

"Upon that," said Dr. Payson, "I made up my mind to preach my sermon if nobody else came."

Nobody else did come, so the doctor preached to the choir and the old negro.

Some months afterward he happened to meet the negro, and stopping him asked how he enjoyed the sermon that stormy Sunday.

"Enjoy dat sermon?" replied the old man. "I clar, doctor, I neiber heerd a better one. You see, I had a seat pretty well up front, an whenever you'd say somethin I'd jess look all round, ter see nobody on'y jess me. An I says to m'self, 'He must mean you, Pomp; you's sech a dretful sinner.' Well, doctor, dat are sermon set me a-thinkin what a big sinner I war, an I went an jined the church down home. I've a deacon now."—Christian Endeavor.

CORYDON'S COMPLAINT.
The garlands on my cheek are faded,
That every morn' face renewed.
To gather which in streams I waded
Or searched the woodland's sequestered,
Whose blooms in dewy wreaths I braided—
Cold, watchet, white and rosy hued.
Now lie on love and all his folly!
My gentle mien is quite foregone.
My looks, that were so plump and jolly,
Are changed to meager, lean and wan;
In mournful slough of melancholy
Right bogged and nered is Corydon.
Sweet, dainty maid, for whose disdain
I do in seath and sorrow fare,
Beauty once lost nor skill nor feigning
Its lovely aspect may repair.
Behold these wretched blossoms waiting!
As you are now, so once they were.

A Losing Joke.
Mr. Jones was clerk in a city office, and owing to the jealousy of his fellow clerks was daily subjected to many petty annoyances. One day his enemies thought they had hit on a plan which would amuse them and add to Jones' discomfort. The next morning when Mr. Jones entered the office one after another came up and said to him in a tone of horror:
"Why, whatever is the matter with you? Are you ill? You look simply ghastly."
Mr. Jones, listening quietly for a few minutes. Then suddenly, to the surprise of everybody, he got off his stool and slipped into the manager's office. A short time only had elapsed when the manager appeared, followed by Mr. Jones, and, addressing the astonished clerks, said:
"As Mr. Jones is so unwell I have granted him permission to take a day or two's holiday; so you must divide his work equally among you until he returns."

Stop Coughing

Every cough makes your throat more raw and irritable. Every cough congests the lining membrane of your lungs. Cease tearing your throat and lungs in this way. Put the parts at rest and give them a chance to heal. You will need some help to do this, and you will find it in

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

From the first dose the quiet and rest begin: the tickling in the throat ceases; the spasm weakens; the cough disappears. Do not wait for pneumonia and consumption but cut short your cold without delay.

Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Plaster should be over the lungs of every person troubled with a cough. Write to the Doctor.

Unsurpassed opportunities and long experience eminently qualify us for giving you medical advice. Write fully all the particulars in your case. Tell us what your experience has been with our Cherry Pectoral. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost.

Address, DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

A BEAUTIFUL PIRATE

BY GUY BOOTHBY

Author of "A Bid for Fortune," "The Marriage of Esther," etc., etc.

When I had dismissed the cabman, I let myself in and proceeded to my con-

"I am afraid of our friend Barkmansworth, if you want to know. I was the man who took him off the mailboat, remember, and my face must be unpleasantly familiar to him. If he saw me, I should be arrested within an hour, and whatever happens, seeing the work that lies before us, that must not."

"Do you think you can be of use to her ladyship in her defense then?"

"It must never come to a defense. It would be fatal to allow her to be sent to Hongkong. They would convict her at once. No, there is nothing for it but for us to plan some means of escape for her, and yet when one thinks how perfect English police arrangements are that seems well nigh impossible. However, done it must be by hook or crook, and we must set about it at once."

"But how? Have you any idea in your head?"

"Not at present, but it will be strange if I don't hit upon one before very long. If only her ladyship could help us!"

"Wait one moment. Perhaps she can. When I left her this afternoon, she gave me a note, which I was not to open until I got home. Let us see what it says."

I took it out of my waistcoat pocket, opened it and read it aloud. It certainly contained the germs of an idea and ran as follows:

I have been thinking over what we spoke of this morning, and it seems to me that, if I am to escape at all, the attempt must be made during the time I am being conveyed from Bow street to Holloway in the prison van. The question is whether sufficient temptation could be put before the driver and the guard to induce them to assist me. Will you think this out?

When I had finished reading, I asked Walworth for his opinion. But for nearly five minutes he allowed no sign to escape him to show that he had heard my question, only laid himself back in his chair, looked up at the ceiling, and meanwhile slowly tore my newspaper into rags. When he had finished his work of destruction, he sat up straight and slapped his hand on his knee.

"Her ladyship is always right. I believe I do see a way now."

"What is it?" I asked in almost breathless excitement.

"You must not ask me just yet. I'll go away and make a few inquiries first."

Tonight at 9 o'clock I'll come back here, and we'll go into the matter thoroughly. For the present, then, goodbye and keep up your heart. Have no fear, we'll rescue her yet."

There was something so strong and confident about the man that his assurance roused and braced me like a tonic. I stopped him, however, before he could reach the door.

"One word first, Walworth. Do you know the position in which I stand toward Alice?"

"I know that you were to have been married within the next three weeks, if that's what you mean," he answered. "And so you shall be yet if I can bring it about. Dr. De Normanville, you have got a woman for whom we all would die. This is your chance to show yourself worthy of her, and if you will allow me to say so I think you will. I am your faithful servant as well as hers, remember that. Now I must go."

"Good luck go with you."

It may be guessed how anxiously I watched the hands of the clock upon my mantelpiece. At last, however, they drew round to the appointed hour and I prepared myself for Walworth's arrival. But, though I saw no sign of him, I had not very long to wait for a visitor. The last stroke of 9 had hardly died away before my ear caught a ring left you I sent the following telegram." Here he produced a duplicate form from his pocket and read it aloud:

To the Lessee Olympic Theater, Manchester: What dates this month? Reply terms, Straus, West Strand telegraph office.

MAXIMILIEN STRAUS

"But who on earth is Maximilien Straus, and what has the Royal Olympic theater, Manchester, to do with our scheme?"

"Everything. In the first place you must realize the fact that I am Maximilien Straus, the world renowned theatrical entrepreneur, and that you are his secretary, Fairlight Longman. Having received a reply from Manchester, I decide to open there with my wonderful and intensely exciting prison drama, 'Saved by a Woman's Pluck,' on the third Saturday in June. Here is the preliminary announcement. I had it struck off this afternoon."

He took from the small bag he had brought into the room with him a large theatrical poster, covered with printing of all colors of the rainbow. It read as follows:

ROYAL OLYMPIC THEATER, MANCHESTER.

Lessee..... Mr. William Carriekford FOR TEN NIGHTS ONLY.

Commencing Saturday, June 30th. Mr. Maximilien Straus's World Renowned Standard Company in the Intensely Exciting Prison Drama, "SAVED BY A WOMAN'S PLUCK." Detectives—Police—Bloodhounds—Real Horses and Real Prison Vans.

Sole Manager and Proprietor..... Mr. Maximilien Straus Secretary..... Mr. Fairlight Longman

"There! What do you think of that for a poster?"

"Very startling," I answered. "But I must reiterate my former remark, that I do not understand in the very least degree what it has to do with us."

"Why, look here, it means that tomorrow morning we go to that coach builder I was speaking of and give him an order for a prison van. Incidentally we will show him this poster and state that owing to change of dates we must have the van delivered this day week. Don't you see? If we hadn't something to show, he might suspect. This poster, however, will set his mind completely

The Dyspeptic's Heart and Stomach CAN'T BE CURED BY BITTERS

The dark red inflamed patches on the stomach, being small veins engorged with stagnant disease-breeding blood, often ulcerating, can best be reached by remedies strongly carried in the blood itself, not by bitters in the stomach, outside the veins and more or less mixed with poorly digested food.

Howard's Heart Relief contains this remedy and applies it in its own way, safely invigorates the heart, opens the sluggish veins, carries away the inflammation and soreness.

Then return appetite, digestion, strength. Who would work well must eat well.

Howard's Heart Relief may be had at drug stores, or by mail at 50c. per box, 5 boxes for $2.

ately set to work. As he was occupied behind me I could not of course see what he was doing, but after awhile he took off my own collar, put on the low one he had brought with him, cut up some crape hair and gummed it to my face with what I believe is technically termed "spirit gum," trimmed its exuberances with a pair of scissors and finally combed my mustache over it. This accomplished, he placed the spectacles upon my nose and the soft felt hat rather rakishly upon my head, patted me on the shoulder and said:

"Look at yourself in the glass."

I rose and went over to the fireplace. But, though I looked in the mirror above the chimney-piece, I did not recognize myself. My mustache was waxed to a point and stood out above a close cropped chestnut beard, while over my coat collar hung a profusion of curls of a corresponding color. Indeed my whole appearance suggested a man whose aim in life it was to copy as nearly as possible the accepted portrait of the bard of Avon.

"It is wonderful," I said. "Nobody would ever recognize me. I feel a theatrical agent all over."

"Remember you are Fairlight Longman, the author of several farces, and my secretary. Whatever you do, don't forget that. Now we must be going. Come along."

We left the house unnoticed, and, having hailed a hansom, were driven to at him, only to come to a sudden halt before a man sitting in my own armchair. He was small and queerly built, wore a long coat that reached nearly to his heels, had gray hair, a ferociously curled mustache and a short, closely cropped white beard. The effect when he looked at me over the edge of the paper he was perusing was most comical. For a moment I stood bewildered, but I was destined to be even more so when he rose and came toward me, holding out his hand and saying:

"Bon jour, monsieur!" Then in broken English, "Pray, do you not remember your very old friend?"

I thought and thought, but for the life of me could not recollect ever having seen his face before. I was about to speak when he stopped me and, changing his voice, said in excellent English:

"No! I can see you don't." Then pulling off his wig: "Well! Do you now?"

It was Walworth!

CHAPTER XIV.

PIOTING AND PLANNING.

Directly I realized who my guest was, I rushed forward and seized his hand with a show of delight greater than I believe I have ever felt at meeting a man before or since. If I had been given the pick of all men in the world at that particular juncture in my life's history, I believe I should have declared for him.

"We had no idea that you were in England," I said when the first excitement had somewhat subsided. "Both Alice and I thought you were 10,000 miles away. You have heard the awful news, I suppose."

"How could I help it when every sound in the streets sets it forth and all the paper boys are bellowing the latest news of the capture of the Beautiful White Devil? But I want to know the real facts."

"You shall know everything directly, but first tell me what has brought you some in this providential manner?"

"I came because I heard that Barkunsworth was coming. I received a warning from Hongkong that he had applied for leave, and I knew that if he found out her ladyship was in England he would lose no opportunity of revenging himself for that affair outside Singapore. But he got away before me, and my welcome to London yesterday was the news of her ladyship's arrest. You did not see me at the preliminary examination this morning, I suppose?"

"No, I certainly did not, and I thought I scanned every face."

"And yet I was standing beside you all the time."

"Good gracious! How do you mean?"

"Pray tell me who stood next to you? Wasn't it a medium sized, military looking man in a much worn frock coat with a velvet collar?"

"Now I come to think of it, it was."

"Well, I was that man. I'm beginning to think my disguises are artistic after all."

"But why all this disguise? What are you afraid of in London?"

"Nobody would ever recognize me."

at the bell, and a moment later a "Mr. Samuel Baker" was ushered into the room. As he entered, I took stock of him, half fearing he might be some sort of police officer in disguise. He was a stout, rather pompous man of middle height, with thick whiskers, clean shaven chin and upper lip, and from his dress might have been a linen draper or small tradesman from some cathedral town. Having warmly shaken hands with me he put his top hat down on a chair, seated himself on another, mopped his forehead with a red bandanna handkerchief, took off and carefully wiped his spectacles, returned them to his nose, and then said quietly, "What do you think of this for a make up, Dr. De Normanville?"

"Walworth," I cried, in utter amazement. "You don't really mean to say it's you! I was just beginning to wonder how I should manage to find myself of Mr. Samuel Baker before you should arrive. You are certainly a genius at concealing your identity, if ever there was one."

"I have had to do it so often," he replied, "that I have reduced it to a science."

"Have you anything to report?"

"A good deal," he answered. "But before I begin, may I light a cigarette? I see from the ash trays you smoke in here!"

"Smoke as much as you please," I replied. "May I also offer you some refreshment? Perhaps you haven't dined? If so, I can tell them to bring you up something!"

"No, thank you," he answered. "I have dined, and excellently. Now let us get to business without any further waste of time."

"With all the good will in the world," I said, seating myself again. "Go on. Tell me all."

"In the first place I have ascertained that the van leaves the prison at a definite hour every day. It drives down, takes the prisoners up and drives back again. This being so, it is certain that it must be stopped on its way from the prison to the court and in such a way that it cannot go on again for at least half an hour. In the meantime another van must drive down equipped in every way like the real one. This one will take up the prisoner and drive off. Once out of sight of the station, it will drive into the yard of an empty house, a conveyance will then be in waiting in the other street, her ladyship passes through the house, gets into that and drives off to a railway station. There a Pullman must be in readiness to take her to the seaside, whence a yacht will convey her to some place where we can have the Lone Star to meet her. I shall cable to Patterson to set off and be in readiness to pick us up directly we have decided where that place shall be."

"But how will you cable to him without exciting suspicion?"

"You need have no fear on that score. We have a means of communicating of our own which I would explain now only it would be waste of time. What do you think of my scheme?"

"It sounds all right, but is it workable?"

"I really think so. However, we will discuss it item by item and try and arrive at a conclusion that way. To begin with, money must be considered no object. If even £10,000 is necessary to its success, £10,000 will be spent. In the first place, we must find a competent coach builder at once. If he has a van on hand, which is hardly likely, we'll purchase it. If not, well, then he must put on all his hands and make one, even if he has to work day and night to do it."

"But how will you explain the purpose for which we want it?"

"I have thought of that, and when I case for haste. Now, you understand?"

"I do, and I must say I admire your wonderful resource. What next?"

"Well, the next thing will be to obtain two police uniforms and two trustworthy men, one to drive the van, the other to act as guard. That, however, will be easily managed. The next item will be rather more difficult!"

"What is that?"

"Why, to find a sure and certain means of stopping the real van on its way down to the court."

"We couldn't waylay the driver and keep him talking, I suppose?"

"We could try it, of course, but it wouldn't be sure enough. He might be a conscientious man, you see, and not like to stop, or he might stop and afterward whip up to make up lost time. No, we must hit on something that will absolutely prevent him from going on for at least half an hour and yet something that will not excite suspicion. I think I see a way to do it, but it will require the most minute and careful working out to insure its success. By the way, will it be convenient for you if I call here at half past 5 tomorrow morning? We must be at the coach builder's by 7 o'clock."

"Come at 3 if you like, you will find me quite ready."

"Then good night."

He went away and I to bed. At 5 o'clock I woke, had a bath, dressed and went down stairs. Punctually, almost to the minute, a slightly Jewish, black ringleted man, wearing a profusion of diamonds, put in an appearance, bag in hand. Though I should never have recognized him as Walworth, I felt certain it was he, so I let him in and we went into my study together.

"Now," said my friend, for it was Walworth, as I suspected, "I don't know what you'll say to it, but it's absolutely necessary for the success of our scheme that you should assume some disguise. As you are known to be the affianced husband of her ladyship, the police will be certain to have their eyes on you."

"Do with me as you like," I replied. "I am in your hands entirely."

"Then with your permission we will set to work at once. I have taken the liberty of bringing a few things with me. You have an old fashioned frock coat, I presume."

"A very old fashioned one," I answered, with a laugh.

"Then put it on, also a pair of light check trousers if you have them."

I went to my room and did as he desired. When I returned to the study, he had arranged a number of articles upon the table—crane hair, spectacles, a curiously low cut collar and a soft felt hat with a dented crown. He gazed at me with approval and then said:

"The effect will be excellent, I feel sure. Sit down here."

I did as commanded, and he immedi-

Walworth had evidently written preparing him for our visit, for early as it was we found him waiting to receive us.

"Zir," began Mr. Maximilian Stragaun in broken English, as soon as he had descended from the tab, "is it you dot are Mr. Ebridge?"

"That is my name; sir," said the coach builder. "And you are Mr. Stragaun, I presume."

"Dot is my name. Dis shentleman is my segretary, Mr. Fairlidge Longman. Now you know, and so we can our business begin to dalk."

"Perhaps you will be good enough, gentlemen, to step into my office first. We shall be more private there."

We followed him into the room he mentioned and took possession of the chairs he offered us.

"Now, Mr. Stragaun, in what way can I be of service to you?" he asked, seating himself as he spoke at his desk.

"Zir! My segretary sprekens de Anglaish better nor me. He vill dell you."

I felt that it behoved me to do my best, so leaning forward in a confidential manner I said:

"My employer, as doubtless you are very well aware, Mr. Ebridge, is one of the largest theatrical entrepreneurs in England. His dealings are gigantic. And it is the business connected with one of those enormous productions that brings us here. In the first place, you must know that on the third Saturday in this present month he has arranged to produce the entirely new and original drama, 'Saved by a Woman's Pluck,' at the Royal Olympic theater, Manchester. By the way, have you the preliminary poster with you, Mr. Stragaun?"

In answer Mr. Stragaun produced from his bag the placard before described and spread it upon the table, at the same time looking at the coach builder as if to demand his opinion on such a fine display of color.

"You will observe, Mr. Ebridge," I continued when the other had read it, "that the whole production will be on a scale of unparalleled splendor—p-p-lice, bloodhounds, five horses and one large prison van, all on the stage. It will be one of the greatest successes of the cen-

so. I'll call upon her this afternoon and see."

I did so, and of course secured Janet's immediate promise of co-operation.

CHAPTER. XV.

HOW WE SUCCEEDED.

At last the Wednesday preceding the fatal Thursday dawned. This was the last day permitted us in which to perfect our arrangements. I had been warned by Walworth that he would call upon me late in the evening to make his final report, and at his particular request I arranged that my sister Janet should be present. I wrote her a note to that effect, and at 8 o'clock precisely she drove up to the door. When we were alone in my room together, I said: "Janet, it is Walworth's wish that you should be present at our interview. Have you made up your mind definitely? Remember there is yet time for you to draw back if you wish to do so."

She drew herself up proudly and looked me in the face.

"There will be no drawing back as far as I am concerned," she said. "No, if you and Alie leave England and will take me, I will go with you gladly. Why should I not? I have no one left now to consider, and without you both my life would be too lonely."

"Janet, dear, what can I say to you?" I answered. "But there, you know how I feel about your generosity, don't you?"

"I do. So let's say no more about it."

Just then there was a ring at the bell, and a few moments later my man ushered in a decrepit old gentleman of about 70 years of age, who immediately the door had closed behind him straightened his back, allowed his cheeks to fill again and declared himself to be the ever cautious Walworth. He bowed to Janet, shook hands with me, and then said:

"I couldn't call in the capacity of either Mr. Maximillian Stragans or my old friend Samuel Baker again, you see. So I adopted this disguise. By the way, it may surprise you to learn that every one who enters or leaves this house is watched and followed. If you go to the window, you will see a man leaning against the lamppost on the other side of the street. He is a police agent. But let us proceed to business."

"With all my heart," I said. "I'm sick with longing to know how our preparations are proceeding!"

"Nothing could be more satisfactory," he answered. "The case, as you well know, will not be called on till the afternoon. The instant it is over the man I cabled to America for and in whom I have the most perfect trust will drive a pair of vicious horses, purchased yesterday, out of a lively stable yard in the direction in which the van will travel. When horses it ahead of him, he will get in such a manner as to lead people to suppose him to be drunk. He will also begin to lash his animals, who will certainly run away. He is one of the finest whips living and will drive those horses crash into the team of the van and by so doing will, we sincerely trust, cause such damage as will delay their arrival for at least half an hour. In the meantime our own van will be in readiness, and the instant the case is over will drive into the yard and after the necessary preliminaries, all of which I have personally worked out and arranged, the prisoner will be put into it, the door locked, and the van will then drive off to us. We shall be awaiting its arrival—you, madam, in your nurse's dress, and you, Dr. De Normandie, as I shall prepare you to act the part of a

From the day that a young man starts out to seek his first position to the end of his business life, his health has a world to do with his success. When a young man applies to a business man for a position, his personal appearance has a deal to do with the outcome. "Personal appearance" does not mean dress alone. It does not mean exterior cleanliness alone. A young man may be clean, so far as soap and water will make him, but be disfigured by unsightly pimples, eruptions and ulcerations on the skin. These are due to impurities in the blood. The blood becomes impure because it is improperly nourished. Instead of receiving the life-giving elements of the food, it receives the foul emanations of indigestion, biliousness and costiveness.

The reason that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best remedy for disorders of this description is that it goes right to first causes. It gives a man an appetite "like a horse." It facilitates the flow of digestive juices. It corrects all disorders of the digestion, and makes the assimilation of the life-giving elements of the food perfect. It invigorates the liver. It purifies and enriches the blood. It makes the muscles strong and active. It tones and steadies the nerves. It makes a young man look as he should—strong of body, alert of brain and clean and wholesome of skin. Medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing "just as good."

"I had eczema in its worst form," writes Austin Ramsey, Esq., of Sallito, Huntingdon Co., Pa. "I tried three doctors but got no relief. I thought it would set me wild, it itched and burned so badly. The neighbors thought I would never be cured. I took your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and am now well."

couple of horses to an enormous Black Maria. They touched their hats to me with as little concern as if the business they were engaged to carry out was one of the very smallest importance.

We returned to the sitting room and waited. The minutes seemed long as hours, and so horrible was the suspense that I began to conjure up all sorts of calamities. Perhaps I may be laughed at for owning myself such a coward, but let the pluckiest man living try the ordeal I was then passing through and see if he would be braver. No. I was in a condition of complete terror, and I'll own it.

Suddenly, with a noise that echoed down the empty corridor and braced us to action like a trumpet call, the telephone bell rang out. Both Walworth and I jumped to our feet at the same instant and appropriated the ear trumpets. Then a tiny voice inside the instrument said mysteriously:

"The case is adjourned and the crowd is dispersing."

With a step as steady and a voice as firm as if he were ordering his carriage for an airing in the park Walworth went to the back door, I following close at his heels. He gave a signal and the crossed the yard to the gates, which he began to open.

"Are you ready?" he cried to the men.

"Quite ready," the taller of the pair answered, climbing on the box.

"Papers and everything handy?"

"Aye, aye, sir," said the guard on the seat at the back.

"Very well, then, go ahead and good luck go with you."

The gates were thrown open and the van rolled out into the half-deserted street.

"Now come with me," cried Walworth, "and see if the carriage is at the other door."

We went inside, passed through the house and out to the front. Yes. The peculiar-shaped hospital car, with the door opening at the end to admit the stretcher, was already pacing up and down.

Then suddenly I heard the roll of wheels. They came closer and closer tury. But we want your assistance."

"You mean, of course, that you want me to make you a van."

"Exactly."
"Just a makeshift affair for the stage, I presume?"

"Oh, dear, no! That is not Mr. Stragaus' way of doing business at all. If he has a fire engine on the stage, as he had in his last production, it must be a real engine, with every detail complete and in proper working order. In the same way then, when he orders a police van, he wants it made in every particular just as you would make it for her majesty's government. There must be no difference at all in any one respect, neither the painting, lettering, nor the internal fittings."

"It will cost you a lot of money, Mr. Stragaus," said the builder.

"Dot is no madder at all to me," replied Mr. Stragaus pompously. "I will 'ave do ding berfset or nod at all. Vot is more, I must 'ave it at once."

"Mr. Stragaus, I may point out to you, Mr. Ebridge," I continued, "is in a very great hurry. There has been a slight pushing forward of dates, and in order to insure a success he is willing to pay you handsomely if you will complete the work in a short space of time."

"How long can you give me, sir?"

"A week exactly. Not a day longer!"

"Impossible. It cannot be done!"

"Den ve must go elsewhere, mine vriend," said Mr. Stragaus. "Dot is all. If you will undertake to do de work and to 'and me over de van complete on next Tuesday evening at 12 o'clock, I will pay you dwice de sum you ask me now."

The man looked up in surprise at this extraordinary offer and asked to be excused for a moment while he consulted with his foreman. While he was absent, Walworth whispered:

"I think he'll do it. And if we can arrange it that way we shall be able to get it safely up to the yard of the house unobserved."

Here the coach builder returned.

"My foreman tells me he thinks it can be done, sir. But you must see that it will mean night and day work for us all. And the charge will have to be on a corresponding scale."

"Dot is nodings to me. You do de work, and I will pay de monee. You agree? Den it is arranged I shall send my men for de van 'ere on Tuesday night at 12 o'clock, and you will 'ave it complete. Den ve can zend it on by rail vorst ding in de morning. But, mind you dis, if it is not done den, I will not pay you von farding. You agree?"

"I agree. I have given you my promise, Mr. Stragaus, and whatever happens it shall be completed by that time."

"Dot is goot. You might, too, 'ave a turbaulin to cover it mit, so dat de publick shall not see it ven ve dake it away. Now, sir, I wish you goot morning. You will be paid for de van ven my men dake delivery."

"Thank you, sir. Good morning, gentlemen."

When we were once more in the cab and on our way back to town, Walworth discarded his German accent and resumed his natural tongue.

"So far so good. That bit of business is satisfactorily accomplished."

"You did not say anything to him about observing secrecy?"

"It wasn't necessary. That poster, which you will notice I have left upon his table, will account for everything."

"But supposing the police got to hear of it and it rouses their suspicions?"

"Well, let them get to hear of it. If they suspect, they will call on Ebridge and make inquiries. He will then describe us and show the poster. They may then possibly telegraph to the Olympic, Manchester, and learn that Mr. Stragaus has booked a season there for his new play. That will put them off the scent completely."

"And what are we to do now?"

"Well, now, you had better come to breakfast with me, I think, at my lodgings. You can there resume your own everyday appearance. During the morning I am going to meet two men I have in my mind for the policemen. After that I shall visit a tailor's shop and order the uniforms as arranged. In the afternoon I'm going to hunt for a house."

"Can I do anything else to help you?"

"Not just at present unless you can find me a trustworthy lady who will consent to masquerade for a little while as a hospital nurse."

"There I think I can help you. My

Then the invalid was hoisted in.

A middle-aged naval man whose one hobby in life is yachting. Arriving at the house we shall carry the patient, wrapped up to the eyes, to an invalid carriage in the front street and drive off to the station, there to catch the afternoon express for Portsmouth. I have secured a Pullman car. The house is also engaged and has been partly furnished in order to deceive the neighbors. I have settled that the invalid carriage shall be at the door earlier than it will be wanted, and the yacht, which I have chartered for six months, will be in readiness to get under weigh the instant we're aboard."

"And what will become of the van and horses?"

"The horses will be taken away from the yard within an hour of our departure. The van can remain there as long as it pleases. We will hope by the time they find it we shall be far away from England."

"And does Alie understand your arrangements?" asked Janet.

"Perfectly. I called at the jail this morning, disguised as a solicitor's clerk, saw her and told her all. You need have no fear for her. She will play her part to perfection."

Next morning the long hours seemed as if they would never pass. All my personal arrangements had been made some days before and my luggage sent off to the yacht at Portsmouth labeled "Captain R. Wakeman," so there was absolutely nothing left for me to do to kill the time till we were due at the house. At 12 o'clock sharp to the minute Janet and I had lunch and at half past set off in different directions, taking particular care to see that we were not followed.

We reached the house almost simultaneously and were received at the door by an irreproachable maid-servant, who did not seem in the least surprised to see us. Walworth we found in a room at the back, this time irreproachably got up as an old family butler. My sister was already dressed in her nurse's apparel, and very sweet and womanly she looked in it. In the passage outside the one room which had been made habitable was a curious sort of stretcher, the use of which I could not determine.

"That is the bedplace upon which we shall carry your poor invalid wife out to the carriage," said Walworth.

"You see, it is quite ready for use."

"I see. And when I make my toilet? I have brought the clothes you mentioned with me in this parcel."

"That's right. I was half afraid you might bring a handbag, which would have had to be left behind and would very possibly have been recognized. Now I think you had better come into the other room and let me make you up at once."

I followed him, and when I emerged again a quarter of an hour later I might very well have stood for a portrait of a representative middle-aged English naval man on the retired list. My hair was iron gray, as also were my close cropped beard and mustache. The very cut of my clothes and the fashion of my neckcloth seemed to set forth my calling as plain as any words could speak. In this get up I had not the least fear that any one would recognize me. By this time it was nearly 2 o'clock, and the case was to commence at half past.

"Is everything prepared?" I asked Walworth for about the hundredth time as we adjourned to the sitting room.

"Everything," he answered, with the same patient equanimity. "Come into the yard and see them harness the horses."

I followed him out into the back regions, where we found two stalwart policemen busily occupied attaching a rich embroidery to a heavy top of wheels. They came closer and closer. Then they stopped, the gates were thrown open, and a second or two later the van rolled into the yard. Before I could have counted ten the guard was down from his perch, the gates were closed again, the door of the van was opened and Alie ran down the steps. Then, forgetting those about us, I rushed out and took her in my arms. But Walworth would have no delay.

"Come inside quickly," he said. "There is not a second to lose! They may be after us already!"

We followed him into the house, and then for the first time I saw that Alie had dressed herself in the van for the part she had to play. Throwing herself down upon the stretcher, she pulled the coverlet across her, donned a wig with corkscrew curls, drew a veil over her face and announced herself ready. Janet picked up her reticule, smelling salts, shawls, fans, etc.; the maid brought an armful of rugs; I took one end of the stretcher, Walworth the other, and so we went down the steps to the carriage. Then the invalid was hoisted in, Janet and I stepped in and seated ourselves beside her. Walworth sprang on to the box beside the coachman and away we went for Waterloo as fast as our spirited horse could trot.

Not a word was spoken all the way, and in less than ten minutes we had rattled up the causeway and were dis-embarking our precious load upon the platform. As the porters came crowding around us, I thought this a fitting opportunity for assuming the role I had elected to play. So, calling upon two of them to take up "Mrs. Wakeman" and be very careful not to shake her, I led the way toward the Pullman which had been specially reserved for us. Walworth, in his capacity of family servant, had mounted guard at the door, and, when we were inside, went off to his own carriage. A minute later the guard waved his flag, the whistle sounded and the train steamed slowly out of the station. So far we were safe. But, oh, what an awful risk we had run!

Fortunately the train by which we were traveling was an express and did not stop anywhere until it reached Eastleigh; so that as soon as we were under way Alie could remove her wig and bedclothes and sit upright.

"Alie," I whispered, taking her hand and looking into her beautiful eyes, "can you believe that so far you are safe?"

"Hardly," she said. "But we must not relax any of our precautions. By this time the police will have learned the truth, and I shouldn't be at all surprised if the train is searched at Eastleigh. They're certain to telegraph in every direction to stop us."

"But surely they won't suspect us?"

"I hope not, but we must not make too sure." Here she crossed the carriage and took my sister's hand. "Janet, what could George have been thinking of to allow you to run this risk? Why did you do it?"

In reply Janet patted her hand and looked affectionately into her face.

"If you really want to know the reason, it was because we both love you."

"You are too good to me," Alie answered, her dear eyes swimming with tears, "far too good."

"Hush! You must not say that. Let us be thankful that our venture has prospered as it has done."

Mile after mile sped by, and soon we had passed Winchester and were drawing close to Eastleigh. Then Alie resumed her wig and veil and, having done so, laid herself down once more upon her couch. Closer and closer we came, till presently we entered the station itself and with a great rattle and roar of brakes drew up at the platform. Then ensued the usual scurrying of passengers, the "by your leave" of porters with trucks of luggage, after that the gradual subsidence of bustle, and in three minutes all was ready for proceeding upon our way once more. Monster Reform Rally

Stirring Addresses by the Minister of Education and the Minister of Agriculture.

THE GOVERNMENT'S COURSE VINDICATED

Speeches by Messrs. Aylsworth and Allison.

The grand Liberal rally in the Brisco opera house, on Tuesday afternoon last, was a happy augury of success. The swing of victory was in the air and those present were delighted to honor the two able and brilliant men who presented the Government's case to them.

The large number of ladies who graced the platform with their presence added materially to the success of the meeting.

Mr. Thos. Symington, president of the Lennox Reform Association, presided in his usual happy manner.

Among those who occupied seats on the platform we noticed D. W. Allison, ex M.P.; F. Wartman, of Colebrook; H. M. Deroche,
Q. C.; S. Russell, M. P. P., for East
Hastings, and others.

D. W. Allison, on being called upon, said:
We were here to listen to two brilliant members of the best government in Canada. (Cheers). For 26 years they had controlled the destiny of the Province and no government had done more for its people and kept out of debt as had the Lennox Government. Mr. Allison paid a graceful tribute to the ladies and hoped the franchise would soon be granted to them. The government had expended about forty-seven million dollars and their opponents had only objected to a half a cent on the dollar. This was the strongest testimony the government could have.
Mr. Allison alluded to the excellent policy pursued by the Government. His speech was well received.

Mr. Bowen E. Aylsworth, the popular standard bearer of the Liberals, was greeted with loud cheers when he came forward to address the meeting. He made a brief, but effective speech, and made way for the Minister of Agriculture.

HON. JOHN DRYDEN.

Mr. Dryden delivered a practical, convincing and logical address and made a very favorable impression. He paid a high tribute to our Horticultural Society, the fame of which has gone abroad, and pointed out the influence for good such a society wielded on the home life. He understood the society was presided over by a lady and he wished them to present his compliments to her. Mr. Dryden made a brief reference to the fight in South Ontario, and the means resorted to to compass his defeat. The Opposition said the Government ought to be turned out because it was extravagant. They don't believe this however. They were now saying very pleasant things about his old leader, Sir Oliver Mowat. When he was premier though, the same old charges were made against him. They were all conversant with the cry, "Mowat must go." He was quite prepared to leave it to a committee of business men and if after examining the records they said the Government had been extravagant he would be willing to resign. He pointed to our parliament buildings, our asylums, the money expended on settlers roads, etc., and asked the Opposition to show where one dollar had been mis spent or extravagantly expended.
The Government might have paid a cent too much for soda, or purchased too many eggs at some time or other for their public institutions, but was their family in the land who had not a similar experience in their own household. Compare the records with other governments and the Ontario Government always comes out ahead. The Opposition said the Government had been developing the resources of the country. He referred to the good work accomplished by the Department of Agriculture in aiding and encouraging the cheese and dairying industries, and the immense expansion along these lines. He said that his department was at work now endeavoring to induce the farmers to raise the ideal bacon hog for the British market.

He wanted the farmers to raise the standard of their hogs, and he wanted the buyers to pay a right price for them. He urged upon them to attend the fat stock show at Brantford this year. He dwelt on the manner in which the quarantine against our cattle had been done away with and urged them to elect Mr. Ayl-sworth and help on the onward march to add to our material prosperity.

HON. GEO. W. ROSS.

The Minister of Education was tendered an ovation on coming forward to address the meeting. He said that they could see that his old leader, Sir Oliver Mowat, didn't make a bad choice when he appointed Mr. Dryden Minister of Agriculture. He paid a graceful tribute to Mr. Dryden's usefulness and his satisfaction that the second sober thought of the electors of South Ontario had resulted in his return by a large majority. Mr. Ross said he thought a great deal of Lennox. They are an intelligent resolute people. He remembered being in this riding some few years ago, when they sent Mr. Hawley as their representative. They had a pretty warm time in that campaign, and he had thought such an able man as Mr. Hawley to the Legislature. You didn't keep it up, however. You fell from grace. You are Methodist down here I believe. You know we Presbyterians can't fall from grace.
They had repented in the last election and had sent Mr. Aylsworth. He was with them for a short time. He stopped with them as long as they needed him. He had only been in the Legislature for half a session and had done well. Give the boy a chance. Send him back for a whole term and he was sure they would never be ashamed of him. He was the makings of an able representative. During the time Dr. McEacham had been in Parliament they could search from end to end and he defied them to point to one useful act he had performed. (A voice. He's no good.) Of course he's no good. He had been painless, useless, purposeless. Elect Mr. Aylsworth as your representative and if after five years he doesn't make a better showing than Dr. McEacham he would advise him to quit the business.

The Liberals were not all of one mind.
They had honest difference of opinion. It was so with the Conservatives. There were a great many Conservatives who were supporters of the Ontario Government. He called Mr. Whitney the leader of the Opposition, not of the Conservatives. He instituted comparisons between the utter weakness and death of policy of the Opposition, with the aggressive statesmanlike policy of the Government. In any big question, affecting the welfare of the country, you will find Mr. Whitney with the minority. He is in opposition where he properly belongs. He is not capable of governing this province. We know this, he knows it and the country knows it.

A Warning.

Some thoughtless boys (we hope they are boys) have been throwing stones and breaking the globe attached to the arc lamps on the street. This has been done to such an extent that forbearance ceases to be a virtue. Boys have been seen throwing stones at lamps and are known. We hope this will be what it is intended to be—a warning.

Peat in Napanee.

D. H. Preston, Q. C., Napanee, was in town Monday making inquiries about machinery for converting peat into fuel. In the vicinity of Napanee there are thousands of acres of boggy land which abound in peat. If the new process for making this fuel is successful Mr. Preston thinks the vicinity of Napanee will be able to supply the whole of Eastern Canada.—

A Disputed Game.

On Thursday afternoon of last week the N. C. I. football club journeyed to Newburgh to do battle with the N. H. S. team of that place. The game ended very unsatisfactory and both sides lay claim to it.
Newburgh's side of the story is that in the first half they scored one goal to Napanee's
nil. In the second half the Collegiate boys became huffed at a decision re a foul kick and left the field. Newburgh claims the match by a score of 1 to 0.

buyer on examining the hide found his private brand on it. The young man skipped out leaving his horse and rig behind.
The owner of the steer intends to retain the rig until he is reimbursed for his loss.

ahead. The Opposition said the Government had increased the expenditure. Of course they had. He had increased the expenditure on his farm since his father's days, but by so doing he had increased his income. He pointed out how the Government had increased the expenditure by grants for educational purposes, in helping the farmer, caring for the unfortunate and developing the country. It could not be shown that one dollar had been extravagantly expended or misappropriated.

Mr. Dryden gave a few examples of the tactics pursued by the Opposition in criticising his department. At the Agricultural College, which is run for educational purposes and not for profit, they have a family of 200. We do not pretend to make money out of the college. They grow fruit, etc., at the college, but it is preserved and consumed within the institution. Last year some of the professors had taken fruit home and they had been charged the regular rate for it. It amounted to $30. What does the Opposition do? They say here is the money Mr. Dryden expended in cultivating fruit at the Agricultural College; what does he receive—$30. They carefully conceal the facts of the case. So too with St. John's story about the $2000 well. The department had put down two artesian wells at a cost of $2000, thereby a saving of $600 per year in water rates from the city of Guelph. St. John represented that this money had been expended in digging a common little well. Then there was the pioneer farm. The Opposition charged up the expenses of running the pioneer farm against the product of a few cows, and gloatingly referred to Dryden's $2 per pound butter. He referred to the ram story, and a few other instances to show the desperate straits the Opposition were driven to in order to make political capital against the Government. In dealing with the surplus question Mr. Dryden said, for 20 years the Opposition had been declaring the Government is bankrupt, still it was going along paying its way. Mr. Dryden showed the excellent audit possessed by the Government and the difficulty of passing any account not strictly correct. They had just as good an audit system as the Dominion Government.

Mr. Dryden dealt briefly with Dr. Meacham's record in the legislature. We were now in a growing time. We are turning our attention to the mother land for that is our best market. We have only one immigration agent there, and Dr. Meacham doesn't believe in it. We should try and get hold more than ever of the English market if we can. He had endeavored to encourage the shipment of poultry there. Dr. Meacham opposed the grant of $1400 to the Poultry Association. He pointed out how the municipalities had lost heavily by the defalcations of county treasurers. The Government had introduced a system of book-keeping and appointed a competent provincial auditor to inspect the books of county treasurers, thereby doing away with the possibility of municipalities being systematically robbed by dishonest treasurers. Dr. Meacham, with that great sagacity for which he is noted, opposed this appointment. He fought against the County Councils Act. Dr. Meacham said that if we passed that act they would raise such a storm that it would drive us out of power. How much do you hear about it now? Dr. Meacham opposed the appointment of a Forestry Commission and a clerk of forestry. The Government was now reforesting limits, but Dr. Meacham had opposed the whole movement. His time was taken up in manufacturing petty campaign cries.

Mr. Dryden pointed out how the Ontario Government had protected and stood up for the interests of the laboring men, as well as helping the farmer. He told of the Government's fight against the San Jose scale and the precautions they were taking to exterminate this pest in Canada. He showed how the Government had provided for the insane and unfortunate. The honesty and purity of their administration had benefited the people, and set an example for the youth of Ontario to look up to and emulate. They had made it possible to say that all politicians are not thieves. No man could point to one charge that had been sustained against a member of the Ontario Cabinet. He referred to an instance in the career of the late Christopher Fraser, who had left a monument to his memory in the shape of the parliamentary buildings. On one occasion a member of the Opposition questioned the honesty of one of Mr. Fraser's acts. Fraser's old slouch hat went down on the desk and he rose, and with fire in his eyes, said: "I demand an apology or an investigation." Mr. Meredith leaned over to his supporter and advised him to retract his words, and he did so.

The foundation of our wealth was agriculture, but the Government had to carry every measure in the interests of the farmers at the point of the bayonet. The opposition had fought the county councils act and had opposed the appointment of a clerk of Forestry and had pooh—poohed the whole forestry movement. The Government carried these comprehensive measures in spite of them. The German Empire was now in receipt of a revenue of 8 or 9 million dollars by reason of their forestry policy.

Mr. Ross pointed out the narrow spirit in which the opposition approached all questions affecting the future welfare of the province. Canada had a great future before it, and the Government had faith in the future. The opposition could not raise above the price of a bottle of pickles, the lumber piggery or questions of a like magnitude.

"We have spent," said Mr. Ross, "ninety million dollars of the people's money. We defy our opponents to put their finger on a single dollar of that amount that has been dishonestly expended."

When the Liberal Opposition in the Dominion made charges against Tupper, Chapeau, Langevin and others, they brought these men before a committee of the House and proved their charges to be true. The Ontario Opposition were carrying, barking and winning but they have not the courage to make a specific charge. He defied them to do so. They had not the manliness or courage to make a direct charge but went around saying that such and such a transaction looked suspicious. Mr. Ross dealt with the surplus question and showed conclusively that the Government has a surplus of over four million dollars. On the 31st of Oct. they had in cash on hand in the treasury $400,000.

Mr. Ross referred to a charge Dr. Meacham had made against him on the hustings to the effect that as Minister of Education he had given out certificates for political purposes. When he confronted Meacham with this statement in the House he would either deny or affirm having made it. Mr. Ross offered him a committee to investigate it, but he had not accepted the offer. He did not propose to let Dr. Meacham malign him in this manner. Let him put up or shut up. Dr. Meacham would not have it all his own way in this campaign. They proposed to make it warm for him. On the eighteenth of November, cold as it is some times, there will be a hot time in the old town. This will put a quietus on him.

Dealing with our educational affairs Mr. Ross said that for a time Mr. Whitney and Dr. Meacham were opposed to having a Minister of Education. Now they said we should have such a minister but that he should be supported by an advisory council. The Opposition well knew if they had to select a man from their own ranks he would need an advisory council. Any Minister should be responsible to the people not to any advisory council. He had an advisory council. Parliament was his advisory council. You want ministers directly responsible to parliament not to an advisory board that the people could not get at. Mr. Ross pointed out that since the days of Dr. Ryerson the number of text books had been reduced from 57 to 11, and he contemplated a further reduction to 8. The Opposition found fault with the number of examinations. He believed in examinations. We go through them in Parliament every four or five years. He was never plucked in his life. Dr. Meacham was plucked last spring. He wanted them to pluck him again on the eighteenth as he was no further advanced in his studies.

"There is the man" said Mr. Ross, pointing to Bowen E. Aylsworth, "who passed his examination by 43 points." Moderate examinations are necessary. Dr. Willoughby says that our school system is turning out a race of physical and mental cripples. In refutation of this he pointed out that of the thirteen men chosen for fellowships in a university in the United States the other day nine were Canadians. The other day the physical and mental cripples from Varsity University, Toronto, went down to Montreal, where they have no Minister of Education and defeated McGill College at football. Mr. Whitney favored broadening the curriculum of the public schools. If anything it should be curtailed. His motto in school affairs was that anything we can afford is not too good for our boys and girls. He pointed out that the total cost of the text books in the public schools is only amounted to $4.95 or about 50 cents per year for each pupil. He told how our school system had been awarded the palm at the World's Fair as the ideal school system and closed his brilliant address by urging upon them to elect Mr. Aylsworth with a big majority. The meeting was closed with the usual cheers for the Queen, the Government and the candidates.

She gradually grew worse and on Tuesday last was removed to the Kingston General Hospital where she underwent an operation. She succumbed to her illness on Friday. The remains were brought to Napanee and interred in the Western Cemetery on Sunday. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Crothers. Deceased was 52 years and 11 months of age and leaves a husband and two children; Jas. A. of Watertown, and Evalyn, of Napanee, to mourn.

Visited the School.

On Wednesday forenoon Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, visited the Collegiate Institute and the model school. He expressed himself as greatly pleased with our educational institutions. Messrs. H. M. Deroche, Q. C., and W. B. Herrington were at the Collegiate Institute to receive the Minister of Education. Inspector Burrows accompanied Mr. Ross. The honorable gentleman delivered a few felicitous remarks to the students. He left on the noon train for Toronto.

Best in the Province.

What's the matter with our Napanee boys? Oh, they're all right, thank you. Mr. Frank Burrows, son of Inspector Burrows, spent a few months in British Columbia. Just to fill in the time he executed a pen and ink sketch and entered it at the Provincial Fair at Westminster. This week he received word that his sketch had been awarded first prize. At sprinting Frank can show his heels to the most of them, and when it comes to a pen and ink sketch, well he is the best artist in that line in the Province of British Columbia.

A Close Call.

The deadly coal stove is more to be feared than the perils of the Klondike. At least that is the opinion Mr. J. Rudd Perry arrived at when on Saturday morning he awoke with a suffocating sensation and found the room filled with escaping gas from a coal stove. On repairing to his daughters' room Mr. Perry found both the girls unconscious. If another hour had elapsed without assistance they would have been past all earthly aid, but fortunately the fresh air soon revived them and beyond a bad headache, have suffered no ill effects.

Has Offered a Reward.

Some mischievous person has been tampering with Jno. B. Scott's electric wires. The wires which conduct the current to Napanee are uncovered and by throwing a rope or some other conducting substance over the wire, the current can be diverted from its proper channel. On Saturday evening, 29th ult., the lights in Napanee went out and it was some time before the cause of the trouble, a wet rope on the wire with one end touching the ground, was located. The same thing occurred last Saturday evening. Mr. Scott is determined to put a stop to this, and we understand that he has offered a reward of $100 for the apprehension of the guilty party or parties.

The Bank Robbery.

In ten more days the great bank robbery trial will commence here and speculation is rife as to the character of the new evidence which the crown is said to be in possession of. A despatch from Belleville to the daily papers says: "It is announced that the crown has failed entirely in the attempt to secure any further evidence against W. H. Ponton, and when the Assizes open, will have nothing further to advance than the evidence of Pare supported by the evidence of certain parties who saw Pare, Holden and Mackie in the vicinity of Napanee, about the time of the robbery." The crown officers are not doing much talking, but state, significantly, that they have several surprises in store for the defence. Mr. E. Gus Porter made an unusual request of the Attorney General on Saturday. He asked that the crown should subpoena the witnesses who were testifying for Ponton, as his client was unable to bear the expense. The crown has consented to subpoena eighteen of Mr. Porter's fifty-two witnesses. These witnesses reside outside the Bay of Quinte district, and among them are persons living in Vancouver, B. C., St. Paul, Minn., and other points. W. Durand is one of the witnesses in question.

Death of Mrs. Shewell.

Mrs. Shewell, aged about 80 years, passed away at the residence of her granddaughter, Mrs. Garrett B. Joy, on Thursday morning. She was the wife of the late Squire Shewell, of Violet, and had resided in Napanee for a number of years. The remains will be interred at Violet.

An Excellent Picture.

There is on exhibition in Hulett's show window an excellent picture of the late Lewis Vanblaricom. It is done in water colors and is very lifelike and natural. Mr. Hulett urges on those wishing pictures enlarged to bring them in before the holiday rush. His cheap discount sale is still on and he is offering wonderful bargains.

The Conservative Workers.

Lennox is over run with the supporters of Sir Chas. Tupper. Mr. Whitney seems to be leaving Dr. Meacham severely alone. Among those who are here in his behalf are A. F. Campbell, ex-M. P., W. B. Northrup, Ex-M. P., A. Broder, M. P., Geo. Taylor, M. P., Conservative whip, E. Cochrane, M. P., Mayor Johnston, Belleville, J. W. Bell, M. P.

The Trial to go on.

During the past few years thousands have had their eyes tested by Smith the optician. Many to whom nature has denied normal vision enjoy perfect sight by the aid of his scientifically adjusted glasses. Do your eyes tire easily? Do they burn? Does the type become blurred in reading? Do you suffer from frontal headache? If so you need glasses. You can't tell what ails your eyes until you have them examined. Don't guess, don't surmise! know, know absolutely, have your eyes examined at Smith's Jewelry Store.

The Swing of Victory.

Mr. Aylsworth's candidature is meeting with great success. The people are flocking to his standard and his election by a big majority is now assured. The meetings in his behalf are being well attended, and much enthusiasm manifested.

At ADOLPHUSTOWN.—On Wednesday evening a most successful meeting was held at Adolphustown. D. W. Allison, the old war horse, was in the chair and there was a large crowd in attendance. The Government's side of the case was ably presented by Mr. Geo. Graham, M. P., of Brockville, and Mr. B. Russell, M. P., for East Hastings. The utter weakness and emptiness of the Opposition's charges was fittingly exposed. Messrs. Graham and Russell make a strong team and are logical and convincing speakers.

At ROBLIN.—J. M. Stratton, M. P. P., addressed a meeting at Roblin on Wednesday night and made a favorable impression. The Government's course was amply vindicated by the able member from Peterboro.

Meetings in Mr. Aylsworth's interest were held at Forest Mills and Sillsville last evening and proved highly successful.

Hon. J. M. Gibson and Hon. R. Harcourt will address meetings at Switzerville on the 14th and at Wilton on the 15th.

It is announced that the Hon. Mr. Hardy will visit Napanee next week, so a treat is in store for our citizens. All should hear Ontario's able premier.

Jim the Penman.

Mr. Prunyn has secured the Dan Ryan Co. in Jim the Penman for Monday, Nov. 21st. The Kingston papers were unanimous in their praises of the company on their recent engagement there and the fact that the manager of the Kingston theatre has re-engaged them for two nights is sufficient evidence of their excellence. Always looking to the comfort of his patrons the manager has induced Mr. Briscoe to put in a furnace and it is now in working order. The patrons are thus assured of a warm building.

A Few Facts.

Mr. N. A. Caton addressed a letter to the Beaver this week in reply to its strictures on the Liberals of Lennox in reference to bribery in elections. That journal with its customary unfairness refused to publish it. Mr. Caton points out that Sir John Macdonald was uneaten in Lennox for bribery by agents and instances the election trial in South Ontario and the protest in North Hastings, where the Conservative candidate gladly resigned to save being disqualified, to show that people who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.

Odessa's New Church.

The new Catholic church at Odessa was dedicated by Archbishop Gauthier on Tuesday amid great eclat. The church is a fine structure and a credit to the people of Odessa and to Rev. Father Bridonneau and his co-laborers. There was a large crowd in attendance at the ceremony and everything passed off most happily. Rev. Father Hogan was in attendance. The Archbishop and clergy were entertained to dinner at the home of Mr. H. Asseltine. Miss Ida McGuire, Napanee Mills, rendered a "Salve Regina" which quite enraptured all present. In the evening a most successful concert was held in aid of the church.

Catarrh Can Be Cured

By eradicating from the blood the scrofulous taints which cause it. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures catarrh, promptly and permanently, because it strikes at the root of the trouble.

The rich, pure blood which it makes, circulating through the delicate passages of the mucous membrane, soothes and rebuilds the tissues, giving them a tendency to health instead of disease, and ultimately curing the affection.

At the same time Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens, invigorates and energizes the whole system and makes the debilitated victim of catarrh feel that new life has been imparted.

Do not dally with snuffs, inhalants or other local applications but take Hood's Sarsaparilla and cure catarrh absolutely and surely by removing the causes which produce it.

A Daring Robbery.

One crime leads to another. A thief, or thieves, affected an entrance into the residence of Billings Amey, near Bath, on Friday night last. An overcoat, a silver watch, and $4 in money were secured. In order to get away with the booty the premises of Frank Amey were visited and one of his horses pressed into service. The horse alone was valueless for this purpose, so after travelling a mile and a quarter Mr. Thos. Wisken's barn was entered and a new top buggy, a set of harness and a whip secured. The night air in November is chilly and David Whithers' place was visited where a warm robe was secured. The thief, or thieves, then drove to Trenton, where the horse, rig, harness, robe and whip, having served their purpose, were abandoned. The poor animal was found in a perishing condition on Sunday morning, standing in a ditch, with buggy overturned. Mr. Thos. Wisken went to Trenton Wednesday and brought the horse and the other articles to Napanee. There is no clue to the identity of the thief or thieves.

ing the town of Napanee and the outlying municipalities will assist him in the undertaking. He has interested foreign capitalists in the projected industry but asks by way of a bonus the sum of $35,000 from the various municipalities interested. Napanee is asked to give $6,000, Ernestown $7,000, Camden $7,000, Richmond $5,000, North Fredericksburgh $4,000, South Fredericksburgh, $4,000, Adolphustown $2,000. If any one of the municipalities interested vetos the grant then, so far as Mr. Bicknell is concerned, the whole matter drops. The importance then of having the matter presented to the ratepayers in the proper light is apparent.

The municipal councils mentioned have been asked to give a by-law, granting a bonus to the proposed industry, its first and second reading and submit it to the ratepayers to be voted on at the municipal elections, to be held on January 2nd. Six months after the by-laws granting said bonus are legalized and confirmed by an act of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario the company will erect in the town of Napanee a packing house, estimated to cost from $60,000 to $75,000, with a capacity for killing 1000 hogs per day, and will employ in and about said business from 40 to 60 men. The bonus will not be payable until the packing house is erected and fully equipped.

In the city of Toronto and other large centres the councils have erected large abattoirs and the companies operating these have thus been exempted from building such establishments as the Napanee Company will be called upon to erect.

It is unnecessary to dwell on the advantages of having such an industry located in the county. It would create a home market for the farmers and add much to their material prosperity. The town of Napanee would be benefited by the influx of a large number of men, which would more than offset the small increase in taxes that a twenty year grant of $6000 would entail. The interest on the bonus would only amount to a trifle over $200 per year and surely this is a small amount to pay for the establishment of such an industry here.

A by-law was submitted at the meeting of the town council on Monday night empowering the council to grant $6,000 to the industry. Consideration of the matter was deferred till next Monday night. The by-law will be submitted to the ratepayers of Napanee for their approval on January 2nd. We are sure our citizens will give the question their serious consideration and we feel confident that their verdict will be favorable towards the establishment of a canning factory in Napanee.

A Quick Success.

Everybody who has seen the picture "The Thin Red Line," the great battle picture of the century, given with the new and renewal subscriptions to the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal, predicted an extraordinary success for it, but we do not believe any body could have dreamed of such an enormous demand springing up for it within a few days. No doubt "The Thin Red Line" will have the distinction of bringing a quicker success and creating a greater demand than any premium picture of modern times.
